THE STATIONERS’ FOUNDATION

CREATING PARTNERSHIPS TO SUPPORT EDUCATION AND TRAINING FOR THE COMMUNICATION AND CONTENT INDUSTRIES
EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Stationers’ Foundation partners with industry, charities and individuals to provide financial and practical support for young people seeking to enter and advance in our industries – from traditional publishing to digital media and from printing and packaging to distribution. 98p of every £1 we spend directly supports training programmes, bursaries and schools, making us one of the most efficient ways to increase your impact on education and training for our industries through an active partnership.

This brochure illustrates some of our current programmes, how we are supported by our partners and the ways you can get involved.
The Foundation is the charitable arm of the Stationers’ Company. Our mission is to provide education and welfare support to the communication and content industries. Charitable activities and giving are an essential part of who we are and the work that we do. The Stationers’ charitable work is aimed at increasing education and learning for those in need. For more than 600 years, the Stationers’ Company has been helping young people to develop in our industries – from our origins through apprenticeship, and today by providing funding and practical support for young people from primary school to post-graduate training. The Foundation is funded by Liverymen and Freemen of the Company, income from investments and donations, and sponsorship from businesses, all of whom wish to give something back.
The Stationers’ Foundation partners with businesses, charities and individuals to provide financial and practical support.

Our partners work with us to provide matched funding for bursaries and apprenticeships that help young people to train and develop their careers; sponsor and judge entries for our SHINE School Media Awards – raising awareness of our industries in hundreds of schools each year; and support our Saturday Schools, which improve literacy and numeracy skills for young people from disadvantaged backgrounds.

Each partnership is different. Some partners are actively involved in training and mentoring young people. Others provide primarily financial support. We work with our partners to agree how we can create the maximum impact together. All our partners join an active community to improve the opportunities for young people in the communication and content industries, and join us at Stationers’ Hall each year to celebrate these achievements.

This mix sparks new ideas and cross-fertilisation through talks, seminars and social events. Our community provides rich opportunities to contribute to the innovation in our industries and encourage the Stationers of the future.

The Stationers’ aim is to provide the most productive forum for UK communication and content industries and promote the development, success, and education of these industries and their employees. The Stationers’ was once responsible for the legal control of printing, bookselling, or copyrighting, and 600 years on, we are proud of the Company’s fascinating and rich heritage. Today the Company remains at the centre of discussion and debate on trade policy and industry developments.

Through the organisation of major events such as the Annual Lecture and the Industry Committee, the Stationers’ provides an independent forum for executives to meet and discuss a range of topics important to our trades. In particular, the Company’s Digital Media Group ensures the Company remains at the forefront of recent technological developments in the industry.
Stationers’ Hall is one of few remaining ancient Livery Halls in the City of London. A magnificent building, a stone’s throw from St Paul’s Cathedral, where the book trade flourished in medieval London, the Hall stands today splendidly, as it did in the 17th century, a testimony to the ambition and flourishing success of the Stationers’ Company. The present Hall was completed in 1673; there was a remodelling in 1800 which added the Hall’s stunning stained glass windows. The Hall remained intact following the aerial bombings of World War II and in the 1950s was classified as a Grade 1 listed building.

Stationers’ Hall continues to be used, as it was hundreds of years ago — bringing together people of the industry together in an environment where they are able to share ideas and learnings from each other. It remains one of the most atmospheric and iconic halls in the City. It is also a sought-after venue for corporate and private events.
This brochure illustrates some of our current partnerships and the value they bring to beneficiaries and supporters. Each one is different according to the objectives and interests of our partners. Many lead to very fruitful long-term relationships that extend over many years. Some partners provide practical support, from apprenticeships to work placements. Others provide funding, which in some cases we match, so that together we can increase the scope and impact of the programmes we support.
